

FSI Label Invests in Award-Winning Technology

with its recent acquisition of a Colordyne 3600 Series Retrofit with mount for a Mark Andy 2200 press that will allow the company to better serve its clients with their custom label requirements. This printing press is highly unique in that it allows for dual methods of printing - flexographic and digital - thereby enabling print jobs to be produced in the most efficient and economical method possible, regardless of the volume. Furthermore, the digital printing process eliminates the need for plates which can be especially costly for shorter runs and lower volumes.

Mark Andy Digital Series hybrid press, part of a unified platform, received the distinguished 2017 Technical Innovation Award from the Flexographic Technical Association (FTA). This hybrid press, which integrates flexographic printing and web transport with UV inkjet printing, allows for increased productivity, flexibility and capability.
